

ADVERSE POSSESSION LAW FOR INACTIVE AND / OR NON-DOMICILED SUBJECTS

Be it known to all subjects residing within the dominion of the grand estate of the Lord Duke, a new law has been decreed by the esteemed authorities for the betterment of the public and the utilisation of dormant personal possessions.

Henceforth, it is enacted that any subject who remains inactive, absent, or unresponsive within the realm for a continuous period of six months or more shall be subject to the provisions of adverse possession. This measure is implemented to ensure the efficient utilisation of dormant personal possessions and to promote projects, both public and private, that serve the greater good of the public.

The authorities, acting in the interest of progress and public welfare, shall be empowered to initiate projects for the benefit of the public using the inactive subject's personal possessions in cases wherein it cannot reasonably be considered feasible to acquire said resources without causing extensive delays to the deliverance of the project. These possessions, including but not limited to food, rare metals, construction materials, and movable assets such as horses, may be acquired by the authorities to fuel projects deemed essential for the advancement and well-being of the realm.

The projects shall be carefully evaluated, taking into account their significance, scope, and potential benefits to the public. Such projects may include infrastructure development, public services, defence initiatives, or any other endeavours that contribute to the welfare and progress of the realm and its subjects.

It is crucial to emphasise that this law is enacted to promote the collective well-being and progress of the realm. The utilisation of dormant personal possessions through adverse possession is intended to invigorate public projects and stimulate growth for the betterment of all subjects.

Let all subjects be mindful of their responsibilities and active engagement within the realm to retain rightful possession of their personal assets. A commitment to participation and contribution ensures the preservation of one's possessions and a harmonious relationship with the authorities entrusted with the realm's welfare.

By the decree of the esteemed authorities, issued on this day, let this law be inscribed in the records of legislation, guiding the responsible utilisation of dormant personal possessions for public benefit.
